all things are artificial, for nature is the art of God. Sir Thomas Brown tender is the night that carresses me as the wind dies down on the morning of my dreams and I wake up thinking, what was it that happened to make me this way?

maybe it was the neighbors leaving for the coast of everlasting twilight or it could have been the fuzz that grew up around everything in sight and left me blinded by the light but here I sit, wondering how to find my way to insanity—

after all, that's what it's all about, isn't it?

Craig Laughlin

In a world of his own, Thinks he has all the answers.

While looking in Through Jimmie's barroom windows, He often frowns and sighs, "Why can they not drink in peace?"

Sam is his name And he thinks that he is saved, Since he reads his Bible, He thinks he can do no wrong.

Stepping inside, First from one man to the next, He offers his service And preaches of salvation.

They take his hand And say to him, "Show me how," But when he's gone they laugh, "If Sammy could see me now!"

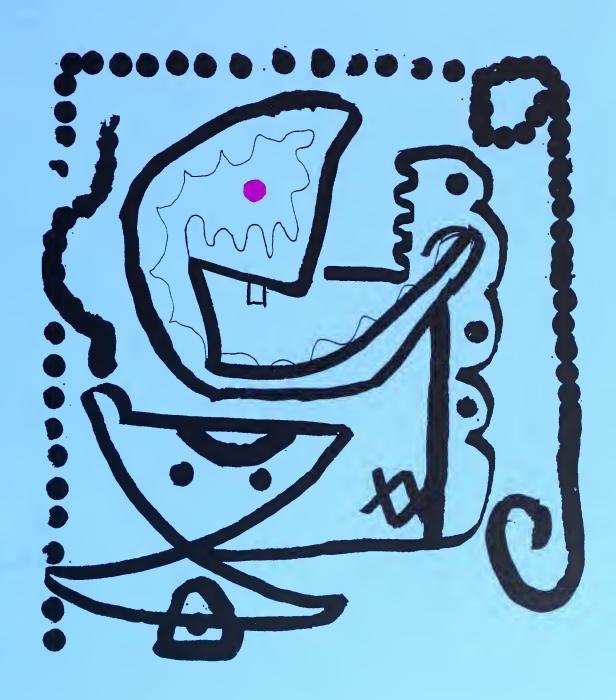

Craig Laughlin

the Beginning

Johnny brought his most prized possession to school for "Show and Tell." With a sparkle in his eyes and a warm tender quiver in his voice (he, after all, loved his teacher) he said, "This is my Rover," all the while hugging the pet, smiling. The teacher's face was perplexed as she shifted her weight from both legs to one while holding her elbow and her chin at the same time. "Johnny, that's a cat. Rover is a dog's name." Something had twisted, soured, and Johnny felt like throwing the cat down and kicking it. He thought of his father as the cat arched cautiously and the teacher yawned and looked at her watch ticking silently.

John Lindsley

Once inseparable and deeply in love

Now a memory in twisted minds. So ends man's love But God lives on . . .

Once a respected leader of men, Now a defeated nobody. So ends man's glory But God lives on . . .

Once an inventive, thriving nation,
Now only cosmic dust floating towards nowhere.
So ends man's world
But God lives on . . .

Once a thing of beauty consumed by the human eye, Now a smear to be devoured by worms.

So ends man
But God lives on . . .

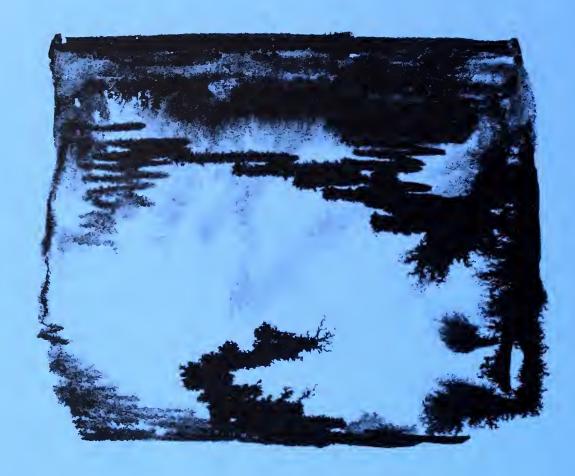

P.W. Leftwich

All of you who have eyes try to see, please try to see. Those of you who have green eyes, try to see the green of the sea and not the green of envy. Those of you who have brown eyes try to see the brown of the earth and trees and not the brown of someone's skin. Those of you who have blue eyes try to see the blue of the sky not the blue of your depression. Those of you have gray eyes try to see the gray of the rain that washes everything clean, not the gray of your day. Look for the one who loves you, not the ones who love themselves.

The Shadowing Black Beath

The wind is blowing high and wide And the muddy river is rising.

By your side stands the felonious blackness Smirking at your near future fate. In past, he hid in squalid corners, Shadowing your every step, And now the moment for which he awaits, Your death!

You tumble headlong into the life-taking waters,

As you go down for the third time, visions of your Life parade before your eyes.

A reverie of a love long lost The queen of your heart and soul.

Sweet memories of the fair coquettes, In your world of jubilation, grow old.

They pass!

You sink deep into a world of limbo.

Your physical being starts on a journey to an Unknown world,
Your body becomes but a flotsam of bones and flesh
Abrogated of all life.
But with us you leave kind memories
Free from all strife.

You will be with us forever!

This fastidious misanthrope of darkness gets his one desire,

Rejoicing over the abrogated life in the ubliquitous sea.

Standing over him smirking and smiling,

He bids him a fare valediction.

Onward he goes to find another victim

To send into the uncertain realm of perdition.

Only through death, he gets life!

from VIETNAM JOURNAL January 24, 1969 As the sun reclined and darkness, Charlie's prime associate, settled, we got orders to move back to Dau Tieng base camp for the night. This was a real morale booster because we could now count on hot chow for supper, a shower, if there was any water even if it was cold, and beer even if it was hot. When we made Dau Tieng we were informed, according to intelligence, that the base camp was scheduled for another ground attack that night. We all did get food; some got showers but only the early ones. No one got beer. The beer outlet was closed down since we were on alert . . . I was sleeping on top of a bunker when I was awakened by a loud explosion, followed by countless others. All I could see were red pieces of metal flying through the air. I fled inside the bunker. Everyone was pushing and scrambling to get inside before the next rocket exploded. I jumped feet first for the bunker opening. My buttocks landed on a culvert half. I felt much happier inside, but my behind had a hell of an ache. When the rounds ceased, just as Charlie knew so well we would, we all piled outside again. He waited and then another flow of lead. Back to the bunker.

Drawing by Stephen Hutton

I finally forced myself outside and tried again to go back to sleep on top of the bunker. With rockets falling all around, I only dozed. In a fire fight we could at least shoot back, but these rockets, coming at night, had an unnerving effect, especially the deadly shrapnel. You hear the hot shrapnel cutting through the air. The metal is so not it sizzles.

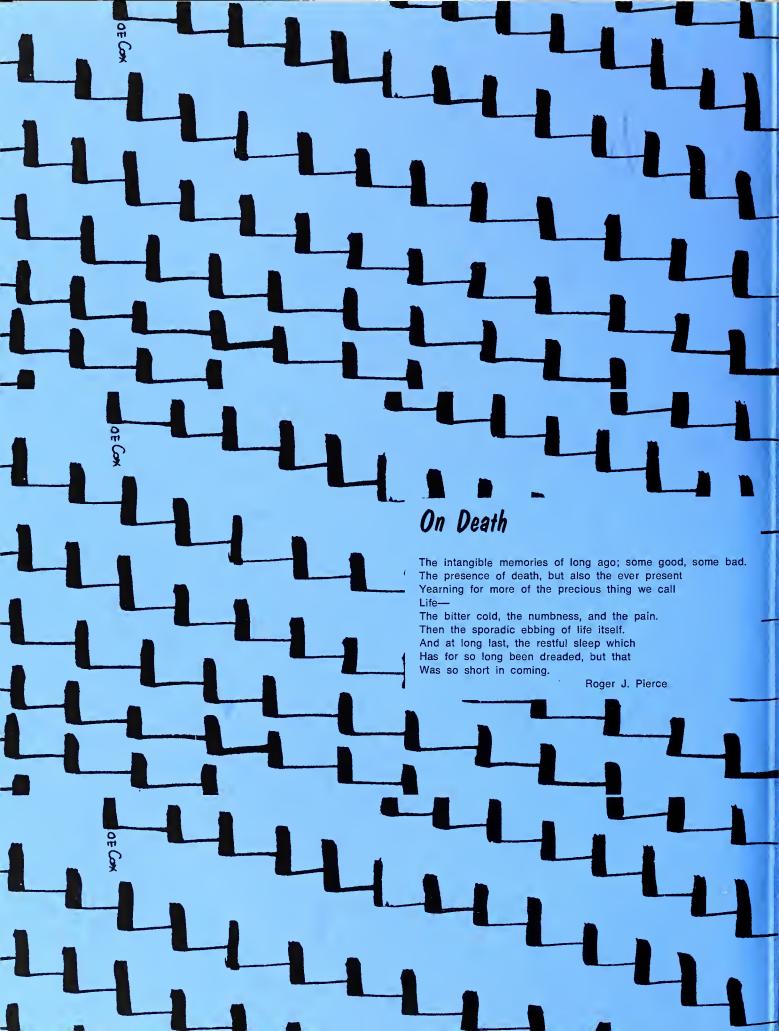

We got word over the horn that there were GOOKS inside the wire. Not much sleep after that . January 25, 1969

We lined up in our prospective order of march and moved out to the east gate, ready to plow into the Michelon, hunting Charlie again . . . The squad leader told us to put on our steel helmets. I wondered why, but expended cartridges from the chopper falling around us gave me the answer.

Past the wire, we found an old woman and small child that had been injured. The convoy was brought to a halt and a couple of medics patched up their wounds. We moved on, about 35 miles an hour, top speed for a combat loaded truck.

We had moved down the road a few miles when the lead truck hit an antitank mine. A couple of wheels were blown off and a few squad members riding on it picked up shrapnel. The truck was towed in, the casualties dusted off, and once again we moved off into the jungle toward the enemy positions....

the Racer's Edge

When you wake up in the morning To the weird singing of birds and such And the wind crashes right through your eyeballs You know that it's really too much

The sun sears your brain like a blowtorch Your mind starts to wander too far You find yourself haviing one hell of a time Just keeping the door to reality ajar

You try not to think but you have to You're afraid that you might forget how, You wish that you never had done it It's a little bit late for that now

STP really isn't good for your motor

Robert M. Parker

School's a bummer and life's a drag, One friend's pregnant and another on scag.

I sit and learn, waiting to start living, While Society roars on, urging my giving. Society's like a beast struggling to eat me,

And if I resist, it'll try to beat me.

If I gave in, and started playing their game,
I'd flip right on out and go quite insane,
But to stay in my world and try to escape
Is a sin worse than killing, and a sin that they hate.

I think I'll build me a ship and set it afloat
To find me a castle, and swim in its moat.
I'll float down the river, right on to the sea,
There I'll find freedom and hopefully find me.

Natas Lived!

Once upon a time, the time doesn't really matter because as you can see this is a fairy tale, but let us say a hundred years ago, there lived a school teacher who's name was Natas Lived. It was near the last day of school and Natas felt that in the year, he hadn't taught the children anything of importance. These children were very young, ages from six to eight. Natas decided to have a treasure hunt, to make the children like and remember him. This treasure hunt was to be held the last day of school. The school overlooked a valley and in this valley is where Natas hid twenty dollars whorth of toys and ten dollars in change.

On the day of the treasure hunt all the children were very happy and they spent at least three hours in the valley collecting money and toys. After the hunt was over all the children returned to thank and tell Natas what a great guy he was. Only one boy did not thank Natas and his name was Daniel Truelove. Natas noticed that Daniel did not have any toys or money, but only held a flower that he had found in the valley. This upset Natas very much and he asked Daniel why he did not have any money or toys and Daniel replied, "I did not look for them." Well this made Natas mad as hell and he told Daniel that he was a fool because the flower he held would soon die and be of no use. Daniel's reply was "Do you think that toys and money will be here forever?"

O God, why do I feel this way? I feel like a total stranger among my family and my friends. I want to feel as if I am part of this family but I am NOT!

God, You know that I love my mother and my father but do I really love them like I really should? There are five girls and five boys in our family in which I am the third out of these ten. God do I love my brothers and sisters as I should? O how much I want to, how much I would love them if only I could.

I am an odd child—I feel like I don't even have a heart at all. I am so cold and bitter—but why?
I don't seem to be able to show my love at all.
O God I want so much to be able to really love people and to tell them how much I love them.
Why? Why can't I do this?
it seems so simple yet I am unable to do this.

There is a great conflict within my soul. I want so much to do the things that I know I should do yet I cannot do the things I would do.

What is wrong with me?
I feel like my soul is a prisoner within my own body!
O Lord won't You please help me to free myself of these feelings?

I have failed my family, my friends and worst of all I have failed you, Lord.
Help me Lord without You I am nothing nor no one.
I am glad my life is within your hands had it been in mine, my long nineteen years would have been over at the age of sixteen if not sooner.

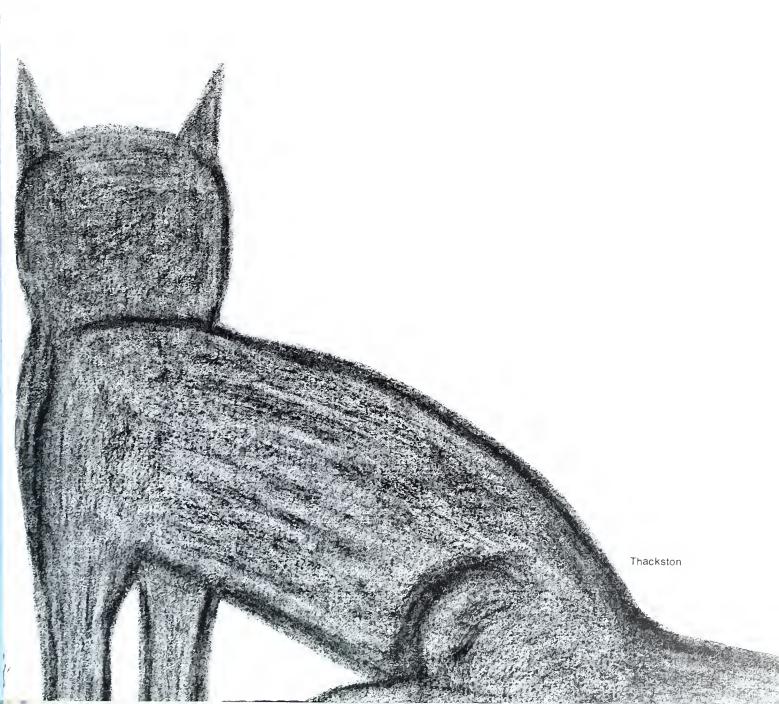

Teach me God the value of today and to remember tomorrow belongs only to You.

And that I must face today while I have it and not to worry about tomorrow because it is not promised to me. Lord, give me a love for my family and all my fellow men A love that will last throughout Eternity.

Debby Angeline Manley

"Oh, how incomprehensible everything was, and actually sad, although it was also beautiful. One knew nothing. One lived and ran about the earth and rode through forests, and certain things looked so challenging and promising and nostalgic: a star in the evening, a blue harebell, a reedgreen pond, the eye of a person or of a cow. And sometimes it seemed that something never seen yet long desired was about to happen, that a veil would drop from it all; but then it passed, nothing happened, the riddle remained unsolved, the secret spell unbroken, and in the end one grew old and looked cunning or wise and still one knew nothing perhaps, was still waiting and listening."

Special thanks to Cynthia Edge for tolerating all the hassles.

What was this year worth? What is an education worth? A good job, a deferment from the Army, a rise in social status. Yes, all of these things, but most of all it hopefully will increase understanding, communication and cooperation within our nation and the world. This is what an education is all about, this is what this year has been all about. Polarization is everywhere. Everyone thinks he is right, his way of life is right, his beliefs are right. No one is right, everyone is right, and we're all wrong. Education, communication, understanding and compromise are the only hope for the future. May God help us all.
